ABOUT ME

I am a graphic designer specialising in printed and online media such as publications, brochures, magazines and promotional material.

Italian but educated in Brazil, where my parents moved when I was a child, I started working with IT at a multinational company, where I developed strong interpersonal skills and the ability to deal with a multicultural environment. An internationally recognized photographer met there gave me the opportunity to learn and work with design, developing a critical perception of the technical quality and visual content of photographs.

After years of working experience specializing in printed media, the work for an environmental NGO gave me more than just proficiency in the communication unit, where I contributed to all design aspects. Most importantly, it introduced me to the satisfaction of social and educational work.

Back in Italy, my working experience in printing houses improved my knowledge of the different kinds of printing processes and machines.

Since 2009, I've had the opportunity to work with the World Health Organization and several of its affiliates, where every job is an opportunity to improve lives. It's been a pleasure to be part of these ever-evolving teams, where availability and teamwork are essential. Although working under pressure is commonplace, the satisfaction of the humanitarian work is always rewarding.

Moving to Switzerland to open my own company was a natural consequence of these experiences.
